What have King Abdullah II of Jordan, President Bashar Assad of Syria and Prime Minister Ismael Haniyeh of the Palestinian Authority all got in common? You guessed it. All believe that a significant development must occur in the Middle East peace process within approximately 3-6 months, or there will be a regional war. Today King Abdullah reiterated his belief that unless something happens soon, the international community will have a major crisis on its hands...

Quote: ""We could possibly imagine going into 2007 and having three civil wars on our hands," he said, citing conflicts in Iraq, Lebanon and the decades-long strife between the Palestinians and Israelis. "Therefore, it is time that we really take a strong step forward as part of the international community and make sure we avert the Middle East from a tremendous crisis that I fear, and I see could possibly happen in 2007," he said.

It is predicted Iran will have completed its nuclear facility by around March 2007 . Friends, looks like this is another one of those "prophetic doors" that the international community will have to pass through no matter what they do. If the international community cannot negotiate an agreement by next year, it looks like Israel will be facing a showdown with at least Iran, Syria, Lebanon and the Palestinians, and all at the same time.

Joel 3:12-14
Let the heathen be wakened, and come up to the valley of Jehoshaphat: for there will I sit to judge all the heathen round about. Put ye in the sickle, for the harvest is ripe: come, get you down; for the press is full, the fats overflow; for their wickedness is great. Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision: for the day of the LORD is near in the valley of decision.
